"Two years ago some form of humor appeared on my scalp. The beginning was a slight itching, but it grew steadily worse until, when I combed my hair, the scalp became raw. Most of the time there was an intolerable itching, in a painful, burning way. Combine my hair was positive torture. My hair was jong and tangled terribly because of the blood and scabs. Over half my hair fell out and I was in despair, really afraid of becoming totally baid. After being asleep a short time, that a viul stinging pain would commence and then I would wake up nearly wild with the torture. I now decided to order a set of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills. I used them for perhaps six weeks, then left off, as the disease seemed to be eradicated. But toward spring, eighteen months ago, there was a slight return of the scalp humor. I commenced the Cuticura treatment at once, so had very little trouble. Since then I have had no scalp treuble of any kind and had it not been for Cuticura I should doubtless be wholly bald. In Spr angulation of the peaks of Huascaran. European engineers were engaged, the aid of the Peruvian government was sought and gained, and the work was done during the summer of 1909. The results have just been reported by Mrs. Bullock-Workman, who declares that they show that the north peak of Huascaran, climbed by Miss Peck, is only 21,812 feet while the south peak, still unscaled, is 22,187. These results, if accurate, not only establish Mrs. Bullock-Workman in her title as the first mountain climber of the world, but sustain the claims of Aconagua (nearly 22,900 feet) to be the highest peak of South America.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Extravagance the National Sin.

A few years ago, writes a New York business man, I sat with a party of men—one an up-state banker, two New York merchants, one of them head of a great corporation whose product enters into the manufacture of a dozen or more leading staples used in nearly every home, and the other engaged in a large way with international trading; the fourth gentleman, a literary man of recognized attainments, and the last other than myself a politician of national repute—an honest man, though the reputed possessor of a large fortune acquired principally by making shrewd quired principally by making shrew nvestments and as a result of advance nformation respecting Wall street op information respecting Wall street operations.

The topic, entirely by chance, was the extravagance of the present age, and the consensus of opinion expressed and assented to by all was to the effect that national, state and municipal governments rush into engagements involving in execution vast sums of money raised and to be raised through the only available source, taxation of the people, and many times larger than the known wealth of the country or the probable endurance of the people, inherently committed to woful waste and prodigality according to their means in personal expenditures, are blind to proper realization of the meaning of these stupendous budgets, and too much absorbed in their own pursuits to give attention, even could many of them do so understandingly, to the direction affairs are taking merely let the movement slide; that the multiplicity and duplication of public officers and the incumients the multiplicity and duplication of public offices and the incumbents thereof, many of whom are in charge of vast expenditures of public fund who never have made and never coul make commercial successes in busines ventures of any description, whill graft, direct and indirect, runs rio with the people's money.—The Squar

Mr. White is associated with Thomas McManus of Webster in this project. Mr. White said Tuesday that they were willing to take all the risks of making good, in which event they would also expect to keep the profits. Joe says that the plan ought to be a good one for Putman fans to consider, and he came here to talk the matter over with some of them. He wants to get a line on what the followers of the game think of the plan, and feels assired that he is going to have their support before he starts to put linto effect his line of thought.

Mr. White realizes that his proposition means a choice, probably, between the supporting of a team in the Eastern Connecticut league in this town and the pian he proposes. Between the two it seems that the league would be the better proposition, but that is for those who are going to spend the money for the team to say. If those who heard understood Mr. White correctly, his plan includes the planeing of the management of the team he proposes to organize in his own hands, or may be some other Webster man. There is no question about Mr. White being able to manage a ball team, but it would be something of a novel experience in this city to see the players under other than home control. If the C. A. C. votes to remain in the league at their meeting next Sunday, the new plan will probably be passed up. It the club votes otherwise, it may be given a tryout.

Old Receipted Bill Demonstrates High Cost of Living Forty Years Age-Wreck of Schooner Gracie-Socia and Personal Notes.

The high cost of the necessities of life is the chief topic for debate in the village these days. One of the principal talkers on the question contends that the cost of living at the present day is not so high as in years gone by, and to demonstrate his argument has produced an interesting receipted bill which is owned by Daniel Slater of Prospect Hill and was contracted by him while residing in Greeneville over forty years ago. The figures prove that the prices in those days were far in excess of those of the present. Sugar sold then for 16 2-3 cents per pound or six pounds for $1; tea was $1.50 per pound; flour, $1.40 per bag; molasses, 96 cents per galfon; pork, 23 cents per pound, and all other commodities were in proportion. Evidence that the price of butter in those days was 75 cents per pound and that called sold for 50 cents per yard was also adduced by the speaker. This fact is fresh in the minds of the older residents and they recall the fact that wayes then were no higher if so high dents and they recall the fact that wages then were no higher, if so high as at the present time. With these high prices prevailing large families were brought up, but the luxuries of today were not enjoyed.

years. Last fall she was brought from her moorings and overhauled and re-paired at the R. Palmer & Son ship-ward, from which place she was sold at auction to the Fulton Market firm of Kingsiand & Comstock for $850. The vessel has been used since that time for fishing in southern waters.

Fish Car on Lone Journey One of the large fish cars owned by George I. Wilcox and used by him for storing lobsters during the summer lobster fishing season is affoat in the North cove.
